New Temperance Organization, At Carroll Institute Hall last night a large meeting was held of the newlyorganized temperanes society, which is under the leadership of Mrs. E. A. Chambers Dr. Kerper of Philadelphia, who spoke, referred more especially to the influence of foreigners upon the drink traffic in the United Sintes. He said that while he was in favor of throwing wide open the doors of the Republic for the admission of foreigners, he was opposed to the intro-duction of a class of immigrants who came here to angage in the saloon

Exton's Death as Accident. The theory of foul play in connection with Edward Cuton's death has been exploded, and the theory advanced by Tun-Currie on Saturday that it was acciden-tal has been generally corroborated, Detective Mahone made a careful inves-tigation, and found that Caton had been drinking on Saturday night. He at times enfirmed from dyspepsia, and was attacked with fainting spells.

Pleaded Not Guitty.

William Fantroy, colored, pleaded not gulity to day in the Criminal Court to an indictment charging him with em-bezzlement of $79, June 17, 1800, from an association known as the Priends of Zion. The forfeiture of his recog-pirances, was set aside by Assistant District Attorney Howard Clagett.

A Pittsburg Manufacturer on a Runaway Car Chases the Engine.

The passenger seized the brake wheel and was further horrified to find the chain broken. By this time the engineer, seeing that the passenger had sence enough left to act, slowed the loand gave over his belligerent demon-strations. The speed of the train was alsokened sufficiently to allow it to con-nect with the locomotive and repairs were made. The trouble was that the coupling had pulled out of the sleeper. This is the explanation of why a fast train on the Pennsylvania Railroad wa four hours late a few mornings since.

says: Oh, take something: a little selt zer and lemon, or soda cocktall, but he thanked his friend and asked to be ex-cused. 'Well,' Insisted the manager of the pair, 'don't take a shingle off the man's house; have a cigar. No, he would not even take a cigar.

"With this the generous man po a large thin whisky glass full of Belle of Nelson to the brim. There was more than three ordinary drinks in the glass. He than drank about half of it, made a face and said to me: 'What's the mat-ter with that whisky?' I replied with some emphasis that it was first-class goods, four years old.

"Turning to his partner with the thin glass half full he said. "John, taste that and see what you think of it." John swallowed the big drink with a relish, but shook his head and replied: 'It ain't right." Then they strolled out, leaving a dime on the counter."

RATHER EXCITING.

An iron manufacturer of this city had a theilling experience on the Pennsylvanta Railroad a few days since, that so far has not found its way tate print. He had engaged ten sections in a sleeper at Philadelphia for himself and family, but by some mistake the first section of the train to which the party belonged pulled out of the Philadelphia depot before the family arrived. There was a bustling for a few minutes, and another sleeper was found and put futo the second section, and, as there was no the second section, and, as there was no time for proper make-up, the sleeper was placed next the tender of the loco-motive. All went well enough until the train had come some distance down the western slope of the mountain, when the manufacturer happened to no-tice that the car was running at a ter-sific rate of speed. Turning to look for becomotive he was horror stricke ere it windling away like the wind, in, and the engineer making frantic ecreotive until the flying train came within car shot and called to the Ironwithin car shot and called to the iron maker to run into the lavatory and turn the valve on the air brake. He obeyed, store rain, all silk.
